News Briefs

$9.5 million in grants will be received by the Cardiovascular Research Institute for the next five years, from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute to continue research to combat heart and lung disease. Grants were approved for the following research: $3.7 million, artherosclerosis, Richard J. Havel, Professor of Medicine and CVRI director; $2.4 million, RDS in the newborn, John A. Clements, Professor of Pediatrics; $1.8 million, pulmonary edema, Norman C. Staub, Professor of Physiology; and $1.6 million, chronic airway disease, Jay A. Nadel, Professor of Medicine, Physiology, and Radiology.

Atherosclerosis, which is marked by blockage in major arteries, is the leading cause of coronary disease and a major contributor to stroke. Fats and cholesterol are major contributors to this blockage. Dr. Havel and his associates are studying the giant molecules (lipoproteins) which carry these fatty substances to see how they interact with the inner lining of the artery to cause this buildup. Respiratory distress syndrome (RDS) of the newborn, sometimes called hyaline membrane disease, is the leading cause of illness and death in newborn infants. Life-saving techniques developed at UCSF to fight this disease include a method to assist the breathing function of RDS infants, and an amniotic fluid test to detect whether a fetus has developed the lung material (surfactant) needed to prevent the lungs from collapsing when air is exhaled. Pulmonary edema, a disease in which water collects in the lungs, is being studied by Dr. Staub and associates to learn why it frequently occurs after severe injury and shock, or following pulmonary embolism. Respiratory diseases are a major cause of death and disability in the U.S., rising more sharply than any other disease category over the past 25 years. Dr. Nadel and his group have experimented with a tantalum powder that outlines the lungs for X-ray detection of early lung cancer and airway diseases; and have developed a new test and machine which they hope will aid in mass screening for early emphysema and pulmonary embolism. They also are focusing on the theory that nerves and humoral substances found in the blood interact to cause asthma.

Zack W. Hall, Professor of Physiology, heads a newly created division of Neurobiology in the Department of Physiology. He was Associate Professor of Neurobiology at Harvard Medical School from 1972 until his recent appointment here. The Neurobiology division includes faculty from various campus departments which study the nervous system. The new division conducts research and offers a graduate degree program in the neurosciences. Dr. Hall has a Ph.D. in Biochemistry from Harvard University. He has held fellowships at Harvard, Stanford, the Medical Foundation, Inc., and received a Research Career Development Award from the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke. His current research focuses on the impulse between nerve and muscle.

The new school year opens Thursday, Sept. 23, with registration for over 700 entering students. Classes begin Monday, Sept. 27. The expected enrollments for the larger schools are as follows: School of Medicine-145 new medical students; School of Dentistry-88 freshman dental students, 24 new dental hygiene students; School of Nursing - 139 entering nursing undergraduates; School of Pharmacy - 109 new pharmacy students. There are also approximately 290 new students in the graduate division. (For orientation schedule see special box on the inside.)

A Legal Assistance Clinic for registered UCSF students has just opened. It is a joint project of UCSF and Hastings College of the Law. Senior law students from Hastings are making available legal counseling on a broad variety of legal problems. The service is free. The offices are located at 1337 3rd Ave. and are open Monday through Thursday. The primary service provided by the clinic is legal counseling. The clinic will provide legal advice respecting a student's legal right in landlord/tenant disputes, domestic relations matters, contract and consumer complaints, and matters affecting the student's civil or political rights. For more information call 666-4342.

The Howard Hughes Medical Institute of Miami, Florida will support the work of three additional research investigators at UCSF - bringing the total up to five - and will support a new Laboratory for the Study of Human Genetic Diseases at SFGH. The support for the five individual investigators, which is analogous to that traditionally given "Career Investigators" by the American Heart Association, comes to approximately $300,000 per year, with another $480,000 annually going to the newly created Laboratory at SFGH, according to Dean Krevans. The researchers supported by the Hughes Medical Institute are: Yuet Wai Kan, Associate Professor of Medicine, Clinical Pathology and Laboratory Medicine, and Chief of the Hematology Services at SFGH, whose work is in the field of genetics, particularly in the area of thalassemia and sickle cell anemia. Kan will be the director of the new Laboratory for the Study of Human Genetic Diseases at SFGH. John D. Baxter, Biochemist, Associate Professor of Medicine, Biochemistry and Biophysics is studying the mechanism by which hormones work at the cellular and subcellular level. David W. Martin, Jr., Associate Professor of Medicine and Biochemistry and Chief of Medical Genetics, is studying enzyme abnormalities which may be associated with a variety Needed: Volunteer physicians, nurses, advanced medical, nursing and pharmacy students to staff the "California Hospital" in earthquake stricken Comalapa, Guatemala. The hospital was organized immediately following the February earthquake by two members of the UCSF Department of Medicine, Jim Adams, a Resident; and Dave Curtis, a Fellow. Every month since then, teams of health professionals, many of them from UCSF, SFGH, and VA have been recruited to staff the hospital, which is supported by voluntary donations to the "Committee for the Relief of Guatemala." Volunteers pay their own transportation, but room and board is provided. Nurses should be able to speak Spanish and Spanish-speaking physicians are preferred. For further information call Susan Nutter, SFGH, 565-8571.

The new SFGH Medical Center now has its first lobby gift shop for patients, visitors and staff.
